A RANCOCK POLE BAISING.

Last Night.

A large crowd of peeple, men, wemen and children, assembled lest night at the dedication of the Hancsek pole corner Maryland avenue and Thirteen-and-a-balf street southwest. Prominent in the crowd were the various democratic clubs of the District, headed by the Jackson Democratic association. There was much firing of cannon, hissing of rockets, glare of Roman candles and blare of drums, all of which, conjoined with the hallocing of the crowds, made an a very respectable first-class noise. The shrick of the occasional engine diagging a passing train was a novel addition to pole raisings, and as the creator of a diabolical din was a very welcome addendum. The pole is 16G feet high, of the traditional hickory, and its surroundings vividity reminded the aged democrate of the palmy days of the party in Washington, when powder was cheap and temperance sociaties generally confined to New England. The staging around the pole was covered with transparancies, Chinese lantern. An immensae booffre on the Lank of the river put up a torque of flame that illuminated the water for miles, and was the one object that would have attracted more than a second let him have the $10, and was about to protest with the lank one object that would have attracted more than a second let him have the $10, and was about to protest let him have the $10, and was about to protest let him have the $10, and was about to protest let him have the $10, and was about to protest let him have the $10, and was about to protest let him have the $10, and was about to protest let him have the $10, and was about to protest let him have the $10, and was about to protest let him have the $10, and was about to protest let him have the $10, and was about to protest let him have the $10, and was about to protest let him have the $10, and was about to protest let him have the $10, and was about to protest let him have the $10. Lost Night. T. B. Kalbfus and H. C. McCawley, Mr. Lloyd briefly acknowledged the bonor and introduced John E. Norris, etq. Mr. Norris is a foreble though bitter partisan speaker, but this speech on this occasion while unusually foreble was singularly lucid, dispassionate and able, a very creditable speech even to a man who has made 500 political speeches in the past twenty-five years. He enlogized Hancock, dwelt upon the statesmanlike abilities of the first candidate on his ticket. ties of the first candidate on his ticket, claimed devotion to the union as the curdinal principle of the democratic purity, and then having perpeirated so excellent a joke, wound up with several of these anecdotes of which he so capital a teller.

A. A. Lipsomb, esq., was then introduced and clicited the enthusiasm of the crowd in veniferous cheers. He unintrained that the contest was not one for the offices, but a struggle for the maintenance of American liberty. With the usual reference to Jefferson and the traditional "taffy" to Jackson, he paid his compliments to Grant and pitched into Secretary Schurz, After criticising Mr. Schurz he gave way to Major-General Carrington, who spoke way to Major-General Carrington, who spoke

He went back as far as the discovery of America and gave a brief but unusually interesting history of Christopher Columbus. Crossing the Atlantic with old Chris. In the latter's little old boat, which, he said, his hearers "would be afraid to go down the river in," he brought him to the West Indies, and thence by easy stages got down to George Washington, and flually to General Hancock. A good deal of this matter was discursive, and to the profane mind irrelevant, but it served to convince the epeaker and his audience that Hancock would be elected.

What the Secretary Said to a "Republican" Reporter.
The limited express from New York yestor-The limited express from New York yestorday afternoon brought to this city Mr.
Michael Davitt of Dubin, Ireland, and secretary of the Irish Land League. He was met at the depot by a committee and escorted to Willard's hotel, where apartments had been secured for him. A representative of The National Republican called upon him and was cordially received, Mr. Davitt stating that he was always glad to impart information of the workings of his association to the press. Mr. Davitt is rather a fine-locking man, probably forty years of age, dark complexioned and wers a full beard and mustische. He has but one arm, having lost his right in early boybood. In the conversation Mr. Davitt stated that his object in coming to this country was to organize land onversation Mr. Davitt stated that his object in coming to this country was to organize land leagues in the principal cities of the United States and Canada, who should render such assistance as might be required until next win-assistance as might be required until next winter. The prospects were excellent for a splendid harvest in Ireland; in fact, it was announced that the yield would be the greatest for the past twelve years. Upwards of $50,000 of the money sent by the United States had been applied to the purchase of seed and distributed among the poor. Although the distributed among the poor of a serious character, still the people would have to be cared for until spring. The land league in Ireland was now bearly 100,000 strong, and among other rules adopted was one that, in case a farmer should be evicted for non-payment of rack rent, no member of the league had in view was the overthrow of the landlords and protection of the peasantry. Mr. Parnell and protection of the peasantry. Mr. Parnell was in full sympathy with this movement, and was president of the league did not propose to allow bie laudlords to receive one cent from the harvests this year for rack rents. It was owing to the unparalleled gene-osity of the United States that the British government was shamed into appropriating $1,000,000 cut of the church surplus fund for St.000,000 cut of the church surplus fund for the benefit of the starving people in Ireland. This money was theirs by right; yet an effort had been made to subvert it from the proper channel and pour it into the pockets of the handlords. But the stand taken by certain members of parliament had defeated the scheme, and the people were tighted. The land league meant self-protection, and the farmers in Ireland had found it out, and henceforth would noursh it tenderly. They also knew that the recent famine was due to English misrule and not to Divine Providence, as find been asserted. In 1852 a movement similar to the present one was started, but the people trusted too much to leaders and not to the tenderly after the case and intended to halp themselves and not have their money wrong from them and squandered by the handholding class.

In conclusion, Mr. Davitt said that he would leave Washington for Pittsburg this morning thence through the principal cities of the west to San Francisco.
